CLINICAL LECTURE SERIES 2020

Critical Race Theory and Psychotherapeutic Practice: An Intersectional Perspective for Black Clients Living in the US

A presentation by Travis Albritton, MSW, MDiv, PhD
Monday, January 27, 12-2pm

UNC School of Social Work Auditorium
Light refreshments and sign-in open at 11:30 am

Dr. Travis Albritton will apply a critical race theory framework to psychotherapy, highlighting blind spots that we as practitioners may have, regardless of our therapeutic orientation or personal demographics.

Travis J Albritton, MSW, MDiv, PhD is the Assistant Dean of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion; Director of the Triangle Distance Education MSW Program; Faculty Liaison for the Dual Degree MSW/M.Div program and Clinical Associate Professor in the UNC School of Social Work. Dr. Albritton's research focuses on critical race theory, diversity in higher education and improving educational outcomes for K-12 black male students. Dr. Albritton teaches in the areas of human development, macro practice and diversity and social justice.

FREE for UNC School of Social Work students, faculty, staff, field instructors & task supervisors.
